

PHYSICAL THERAPIST ASSISTANT

Physical therapist assistants help patients of all ages with health conditions or physical limitations that impair their ability to perform daily tasks. Under the direction of physical therapists, PTAs assist patients in hospitals, clinics, rehabilitation facilities, skilled nursing centers, and home health to help them lead more active lives. PTAs can also be found in schools, corporate or industrial environments, athletic facilities, and fitness or sports training centers, helping individuals prevent or improve loss of mobility.

OCtech's Physical Therapist Assistant program helps you develop the intellectual and practical abilities necessary to be a successful PTA. You'll explore direct interventions in aerobic endurance, balance and coordination, body mechanics, ergonomics, breathing, gait and locomotion, motor function, strength, and more. Our on-campus lab and off-site clinical experiences offer you essential hands-on learning opportunities that build upon classroom concepts. Upon graduation from the Associate Degree in Applied Science, you'll be ready for the National Physical Therapist Assistant Examination and prepared to provide excellent care in our community and beyond.
